PREFACE

The handbook has been prepared by the Federal State Statistics Service on the basis of information obtained by the State statistical bodies from organisations, the results of current surveys as well as by the data supplied by ministries and agencies of the Russian Federation.

The handbook contains data on population by sex groups, women and men age composition, life expectancy, migrational flows, educational attainment, training of students of secondary special and higher professional education institutions, on morbidity of selected diseases, economic activity of women and men, their employment at federal bodies of state power and of subjects of the Russian Federation as well as at legislative and executive power, at courts and the office of public prosecutor, local governing bodies, employees wages and salaries and other information characterizing gender situation in Russia.

The estimates of the resident population size for 2003 with due regards for the results of the 2002 All-Russia Population Census are published in the abstract. These estimates were used while calculating those indicators for 2003 which are formed using data on population size. The same kind of indicators for the period before 2003 are represented not taking into account the last population census results.

Data on women and men by subjects of the Russian Federation are also included in the publication.

During a number of years the publication has been issued: since 1997 till 2000 – annually, since 2002 – every other year.
